Overview

The ranking was compiled from the Russell 3000 companies (excluding Real Estate companies), and ranks companies from 1 to 2717 based on the companies' MVA – Market Value Added – measure as calculated at the end of April 2003. The companies at the beginning of the ranking table have the highest MVA (have created the most shareholder wealth as measured in USD). As a reference point, companies' calculated ranks for 1999 are also presented (in other words the companies' position in a similar ranking table constructed with data as of April 2000).

Market data is as of at the end of April for industrial companies and end of March for financial institutions. All operating measures (capital, NOPAT, EVA etc.) were based on financial information available as of at the end of April 2003. Consequently, the operating measures for certain companies are based on fiscal year data while for other companies the measures were calculated from quarterly-based last twelve months data (where available). All data – except for the percentage ROAC and 3-year sales growth information plus the percentile-based PRVit, Performance, Risk and Valuation scores – are in millions of USD. Apart from the most recent market and operating information, the table also includes data comparing results from 3 years ago.

The table includes the following columns:

Current MVA:

Market Value Added measures the “excess” value created by the company for its shareholders over and above the amount of Capital employed. Mathematically it is the difference between Market Value – calculated as the sum of the market value of equity, debt and the market value of outstanding stock options – and the company's invested Capital – the cash investors, both equity- and debt-holders, contributed to the company's operations. A high MVA indicates that the company has created substantial wealth for its shareholders. At the same time, MVA and the size of MVA – especially when compared against current EVA – also give an indication about investors' expectations for future performance by the company. Since MVA is equivalent to the present value of all future expected EVAs, a high MVA indicates that investors expect the company to generate significant amounts of EVA (economic profit) in the future.

3-year Change in MVA:

Mechanically, this measure expresses the difference between the company's current MVA level and its MVA 3 years ago – as of at the end of April 2000. The measure includes important information about how much wealth the company has created/destroyed over the interval, and indicates how investors' expectations changed with regards to the company. A decline in MVA suggests that investors' expectations for the company have diminished, either due worse-than expected performance or a revision in outlook for the company and/or its sector.

Current EVA:

EVA or Economic Value Added is an estimate of true economic profit, profit that accrues to the company's shareholders after all operating costs (including taxes) and financing expenses have been covered. EVA is calculated as Net Operating Profit after Taxes (NOPAT) less the full cost of capital: a cost that includes the cost of debt-financing, as well as equity-financing and is calculated by multiplying the company's Operating Capital with the weighted average cost of capital. EVA thus combines income statement and balance sheet information into one easy-to-interpret measure of operating performance. Positive EVA always indicates actual profit, 0 EVA indicates the economic break-even point with all costs covered and no excess profit realized, while negative EVA means economic loss and value-destruction.

EVA is also measured after eliminating accounting distortions that misrepresent economics, including the following adjustments:

1. Excluding the impact of changes in reserves from NOPAT
2. Including options expense as an operating expense in NOPAT
3. Adjusting Capital to include the PV of operating leases
4. Pension adjustment to correctly account for the pension and OPEB expense
5. Capitalizing and amortizing marketing and advertising and R&D expense
6. Capitalizing and excluding from NOPAT all non-recurring charges and items (unusual and special charges, extraordinary charges, gains/losses from asset disposal/sale of investments etc...)
7. Including imputed goodwill from pooling acquisitions in capital (historical adjustment) etc...

3-year change in EVA:

The 3-year change in EVA indicates the trend in economic performance. A positive change in EVA results from 1) reducing costs (including taxes); 2) managing assets and re-deploying capital; 3) investing capital and growing through positive NPV projects that earn returns over the cost of capital; and 4) reducing the cost of capital, both as a result of reductions in the general level of interest rates and management strategies for capital structure, dividends, risk management and investor communications. The trend in EVA will also reflect cyclical and sector trends.

ROAC:

Return on Average Capital, calculated by dividing NOPAT with average capital, indicates productivity in allocating and managing capital. By itself, ROAC is an incomplete measure, however, since it does not account for risk (and the cost of capital), and being scale-less, it overlooks growth. For example, Home Depot's almost 16% ROAC is much higher than Wal-Mart's 13% return, and yet, Wal-Mart's lower return on capital translates into over $1.5 billion more EVA or economic profit given the difference in size, and significantly more MVA (Wal-Mart has the third largest MVA of any company).

Company type:

Companies are categorized along measures of economic profitability and growth. These two dimensions of operating performance and trends are expected to be key inputs in the determination of the company's value by the market. The following five categories are used by Stern Stewart & Co. to describe the valuation stages through which companies progress from their inception to their eventual (and likely) stagnation.

X (or Break-even) companies: X companies are in equilibrium and earning ROAC close to their cost of capital (defined as EVA margins between -1.5% and 1.5%), and thus they "break-even" on EVA. Such firms generally sell close to book value, with small relative MVAs, regardless of their rate of growth.

Z (or Zoom) companies: These businesses are earning returns above their cost of capital and thus generating positive EVA (their EVA margin is greater than 1.5%). Meanwhile, they are enjoying 3-year average Sales growth that exceeds 15%. Z companies are likely to be accorded a very high MVA valuation and to sell for the highest valuation multiples. Such firms also typically have a negative free cash flow after investment.

Y (or Established) companies: Y firms are earning returns above their cost of capital and thus generating positive EVA (EVA margin is greater than 1.5%), but unlike Z companies their 3-year average growth rate has remained below 15%. The valuation of these companies relies more heavily on their strong current operations. Free cash flow tends to be positive: Y companies are net cash generative as opposed to the faster growing, but usually "cash-burning" Z companies.

X- (or pre-X or Challenged) companies: These companies are losing EVA (Their EVA margin is below -1.5%), and destroying wealth while they are growing Sales at a rate less than 15% on average.

Z- (pre-Z or Gamble) companies: Venture capital type firms that have been earning less than their cost of capital and thus have been producing a negative EVA (EVA margin is less than -1.5%) over the last 3 year. Their average annualized trailing 3 years Sales growth is above 15%. These firms are characterized by grossly negative free cash flows and their valuation relies heavily on future EVA.

PRVit score:

PRVit is Stern Stewart's proprietary performance, risk, and valuation investment technology. It is a purely quantitative, EVA-based stock rating and investment screening system.

PRVit is derived from a cross-sectional and time series statistical analysis of the financial results of all Russell 3000 companies that is updated monthly. PRVit shows how a company compares to its sector peers and the market universe in terms of its operating performance, risk, and key valuation multiples.

PRVit brings together the three factors of performance, risk and valuation and develops an overall index of investment timeliness by computing a company's risk adjusted performance potential per unit of valuation (or in symbols, by taking its P score less its R score and dividing by its V score). In effect, the PRVit score computes a company's intrinsic MVA in the numerator (based on its risk-adjusted potential to drive profitable EVA growth), and divides that by a representation of its actual MVA in the denominator. PRVit effectively compares the performance, risk and valuation tradeoffs evident within each company against the market universe of such tradeoffs to position a company on a relative valuation scale.

The resulting overall PRVit-score – which runs from 0 to 100 - indicates the company's relative attractiveness as compared to the Russell 3000. A PRVit score of 50 thus indicates a fair balance among all three factors, and a seeming parity between the firm's intrinsic value and its traded value, given current market conditions. A high PRVit score on the other hand – in the range of 67 to 100 – indicates an investor can acquire a considerable amount of valuable performance potential for a reasonable valuation price, and thus the stock may have stored up the potential to outperform the market if past trends are sustained. A low PRVit score, say from 0 to 33, suggests the company's market value is aggressive compared to past performance trends, and without a good reason to expect a significant reversal an investor should avoid buying the shares as such companies are deemed likely to under-perform the market.

At the heart of PRVit are 12 carefully selected, precisely computed and exhaustively tested indicators that collectively depict the essence of corporate performance, risk, and valuation as below:

Performance sub-score:

The Performance sub-score of the PRVit score combines four different measures of operating performance:

P1 - Sales growth: Sales growth rate. The rate of expansion from internal and acquisition growth.

P2 - EVA/Sales margin: EVA to Sales ratio. The economic profit margin, the percent of Sales that converts into EVA profit after subtracting all operating and capital costs

P3 - EVA spread: EVA to Average Capital ratio. Mathematically this is the same as the spread between the return on capital (ROAC) and the cost of capital (CoC).

P4 - EVA momentum: Recent change in EVA scaled by beginning Capital. The metric reflects the recent trend of EVA.

Corporate performance is rated according to four key measures – a company's growth rate, and its margins, returns, and momentum, all assessed in relevant EVA terms. An individual firm's performance measures are compared against the distribution of outcomes registered by the Russell universe of companies and the firm's sector peers, and the company's relative position is expressed as a percentile.

The four individual percentile measures are summed to an overarching performance factor – a P score – which denotes the overall quality of a company’s economic performance, again as a percentile. A P score of 75, for instance, indicates that the company’s potential for earning and growing real economic profit – as demonstrated by the pattern of its past performance – is rated better than 3 out of 4 companies.

Risk sub-score:

The Risk sub-score indicates the level of riskiness for the specific companies. Similarly to the Performance score, Risk also aggregates four different measures of risk:

R1 - Standard deviation of Total Stock Return: Standard deviation of annualized total stock return (monthly) for the past 5 years.

R2 - Financial leverage: Total debt and leases to MV ratio. Reflects the financial leverage and bankruptcy probability of a company.

R3 - Free Cash Flow rate: FCF divided by Average Capital. Mathematically this is the same as the return on capital less the growth rate in capital. If positive indicates excess cash from operations, a sign of lower risk; if negative, a sign of funding risk.

R4 - Size index: Logarithmic average of Sales and Capital. The metric is an indicator of track record, resiliency, and political power.

Valuation sub-score:

The Valuation sub-score is also a composite indicator based on the following four measures of valuation:

V1 - Enterprise multiple: Total Market Value to EBITDA ratio. The multiple expresses the number of years of pre-tax operating cash flow required to match the current Market Value.

V2 - MVA margin: Market Value Added to Sales ratio. This is the rate at which Sales translates into a shareholder wealth premium.

V3 - MVA spread: Market Value Added to Capital ratio. It expresses the rate at which Capital invested is multiplied into a wealth premium.

V4 - Future Growth Reliance: Future Growth Value to Total Market Value ratio. The measure is equal to the percent of total value that is dependent on the growth in EVA profit.
